TWO PRIESTS ESCAPE

Flee to Home of Ranchers to Escape Wrath at Hands of Mob

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 10.—(AP)—A dispatch in the Mexican newspaper, La Prensa, published this morning stated that 80 persons had died in a church fire at San Carlos, in the state of Toluca, when the edifice was set on fire by religious enemies.

The newspaper La Prensa added that those not burned to death were shot to death as they tried to escape.

While the peasants were at early morning worship, before going to their work in the fields, their enemies poured gasoline around the outside of the building and touched a match to it.

Before setting fire to the building they barred the doors and windows to prevent the escape of the worshippers. The frantic victims finally managed to batter down the doors, but were shot to death as they came to the outside.

Two priests, in some manner escaped to a nearby ranch house. Later they returned to the burned church to try to find some of the relics they had left. When the assailants learned of this they killed the two ranch owners, but the two priests escaped the second time.

The event occurred several days ago the newspaper said but was just learned of today.

In Conference on Oil Land Charges

Amendment Number 24 For Special Elections

Governor Must Call Special Election to Fill Vacancies in Office or Special Measures of State Importance

Editor's Note—This is the sixth in a series of articles dealing with the nine proposed constitutional amendments and two initiated acts to be voted upon November 4. The following deals with Proposed Amendment No. 24.

By HENRY N. DORRIS
Associated Press Staff Writer.

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 10.—(P)—Proposed Amendment No. 24, to be voted upon in the general election November 4, makes it the duty of the governor to promptly call a special election on a proper petition for a referendum vote on a state measure, and does not exempt him, by reason of his office, from mandamus proceedings to compel him to call such an election.

This amendment is one of seven sponsored by the Arkansas Taxpayers Protective Association.

The proposed amendment provides that where there is a vacancy in office to be filled under section 50 of Article VII of the constitution, the governor also shall promptly call an election.

Section 50 of Article VII reads:

Columbia Said to Have Landed Today at Tresco, Cornwall

Formerly Reported 200 Miles Off Coast By Steamer "Virgilia"

VETERAN AIRPLANE

Columbia Used Charles
Levine in Flight to Germany

Bulletin
LONDON, Oct. 10.—(AP)—Reports reached here tonight that the monoplane Columbia had landed at Tresco, Cornwall.

CROYDON, England, Oct. 10.—(AP)—An airplane believed to be flown by Erroll Boyd and Harry Connor, was reported to have been sighted by the steamer "Virgilia" at 2:30 p. m. today, (9:30 a. m. Eastern Standard Time), approximately 200 miles west of the Cornish coast.

The plane was reported to have been flying low and in an easterly direction.

Weather conditions apparently have been favorable and the flyers of the veteran airplane have been speeding eastward without apparent difficulty.

Charles A. Levine, used the same ship in his flight to Germany and is the veteran of many flights. Mr. Levine took off from Paris to fly to Croydon, where he will meet the flyers.

The "Virgilia" reported seeing the number 140, plainly on the side of the airplane which they sighted.

Two numbers are painted on the Columbia, NX-237, which classes it as an experimental ship and gives it the right to cross international borders and the racing number 140.

Louisiana Bandits Quickly Captured

Two Caught After Having Held Up Bank at Converse

CONVERSE, La., Oct. 10.—(P)—Within an hour after the Bank of Converse had been held up by two masked men and robbed of $3,883.50 two men were arrested in the Sabine river swamps and identified, and most of the loot has been recovered.

The captives, taken after a gun battle with two members of a trailing posse, refused to give their names. They were returned here and identified by R. D. Darnell, cashier of the bank, and C. W. Wooten, who was outside the bank when the robbers fled.

After their arrest by E. N. Nolen and Goodwin Harris 10 miles west of Converse, the two led officers to a culvert near the scene of their capture, where they had hidden the money.

When the robbers entered the bank the cashier was in his office and his wife was seated beside him. Mr. Darnell was forced to turn over practically all the money in the bank and his wife fainted and fell to the floor.

The bandits forced Mr. Darnell to enter the vault, dragging the limp form of his wife with him. After their exit he emerged from the vault and fired several shots in the air.

Pola Negri Files Divorce Papers

Second Time Such Papers
Have Been Filed By Noted Actress

PARIS, Oct. 10.—(P)—Pola Negri, motion picture actress, filed divorce proceedings against her husband, Prince Serge, here today. This is the second time she has sought to break the bonds with the fascinating Prince. In November 1929 proceedings were filed and in December of the same year it was announced that the couple had kissed and made up.

"We have been separated but never in our hearts," she was quoted as saying without other comment.

Then rumors began to float about that all was not so peaceful in the little love nest. Today the proceedings were filed.

The meeting will continue every night, all next week.

Motor Bus, Truck Collide; One Dead

Victim Dies in Camden
Hospital; Three Others
Are Injured

CAMDEN, Oct. 10.—One man was injured fatally and two others were hurt when a Cotton Belt passenger bus and a Chevrolet truck collided on the Camden-Stephens highway, two miles south of Camden, Thursday night.

William Pierce, aged 22, died in the Camden hospital soon after the accident, while Bud Wallace and Leonard Mullins, companions, suffered cuts and bruises about the body and head.

Miss Phyllis Smith of Camden, who was with the three men in the truck, suffered only slight bruises.

It was said that the lights on the truck Mullens was driving were not functioning. Mullens said the lights went out when the truck struck a bump at the covered bridge, several yards north of the scene of the accident. It is believed that the bus driver was unable to see the truck.

Mullens said he drove the truck as far to the right as he could without running into the ditch.

Robber Captured Soon After Crime

Holds Up Texarkana Drug Store; Caught Ten Minutes Later

TEXARKANA, Oct. 10.—A bandit who held up the Fowler Drug store on East Broad street Thursday night was captured ten minutes later.

The prisoners gave his name as Jack Mauldin of Nashville, and told officers that he has served a term in the state penitentiary for a prohibition violation. He is about 38.

The robber entered the drug store with a drawn revolver and from the cash register took $40 and about $30 in checks. He fired two shots into the floor and another that narrowly missed the proprietor, then fled. Officers said charges of robbery and assault with intent to murder will be lodged against Mauldin.

Wheat Shipment Is Due Here This Week

Is Second Car to Be Ordered
Within Past 30 Days

A co-operative shipment of wheat is expected to arrive in Hope the latter part of next week to be sold to those in this section who desire to purchase.

This is the second co-operative shipment received here, the other having arrived about a month ago. The entire contents of this car was sold before its arrival, since wheat as a feed has been in demand because of the shortage of the use of wheat as a feed shows to be much more economical.

Farmers or anyone who wish to obtain a part of this second shipment will get in touch with the county agent before the arrival of the car. Only one car will be in the shipment, so orders must be placed at once, as in the case of the other car the supply will likely be short of the demand.

4-H Dairy Judges to Leave Saturday

Local Boys Win Trip to National Dairy Show
at St. Louis

The four 4-H club boys who will represent Arkansas and Hempstead county at the National Dairy Show in St. Louis, and which opens today will leave here tomorrow on the 6 o'clock M. Pacific train. These will make a total of at least five persons who are attending the show from Hempstead county, the other being William McClung of near Blevins, and who left for St. Louis today.

Three of these 4-H club boys won their dairy trip as a result of winning the State dairy cattle judging contest which was held at Farmers' Week last summer. These three boys are Sloan Goodlett, Ozark; Gladis Tollet, Ozark; and Nolen Lewellen, Hope.

They will there compete with dairy judging teams from various other judging for the national championship which team will make a trip to England to compete for international judging honor. The Oklahoma dairy judging team has been carrying off this honor for the past two years, but it is hoped that the Arkansas team will this year be able to bring home that prize.

Winston Cobb, 4-H club member of Hope, also won a free trip as a result of writing an essay on "The History of a Pound of Cheese." The essay was judged the best in the state out of about 35 entries.

This will be the second trip for Nolen Lewellen and Winston Cobb since they represented Arkansas last year at the National Dairy show as the Arkansas dairy demonstration team. Such trips as these are of particular educational value to 4-H club members and furnish inspiration to them to "Make the Best Better" as their motto states.

Miner Killed By Electrical Shock

Man Is Found Dead Near Steel Pit Car at Paris

PARIS, Oct. 10.—Clon Applegate, 59, miner of Dover, was found dead by a Comet mine here about noon today by Ransome and another miner. He is survived by his wife, three children, a step-son, and a step-daughter. Applegate was running the car when a wire from which insulation had been stripped.

A slight burn on the arm indicated that Applegate had touched the wire. Coroner Sam Meredith said death was due to electrocution.

Applegate came here a few days ago from Dover and had worked only two nights in the Comet mine. He is survived by his wife, three children, a step-son, and a step-daughter. Applegate was running the car when a wire from which insulation had been stripped.

Crushed to Death As Iron Pipes Roll

Pine Bluff Youth's Body
Found in Freight Car
at Camden

CAMDEN, Oct. 10.—An attempt to "beat" his way to see the Pine Bluff High School football team play at Marshall, Texas, ended fatally Thursday for T. W. White Jr., 13-year-old Pine Bluff grammar school student. His mangled body was extricated from a gondola freight car loaded with iron pipes here.

The load in the gondola car shifted, crushing him to death, after he had boarded the freight train at 1:30 p. m. at Pine Bluff and had hidden among the pipes with a companion.

Dillon Tisdale, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Tisdale of Pine Bluff, student at White at the First Ward school, left the train at Boarden, 18 miles north of here, and telephoned to railroad officials at Camden that White was trapped in the car. Tisdale returned to Pine Bluff on another freight train and did not know of his companion's death until his arrival there.

Young Tisdale said that White's body had been caught in the pipes before the train reached Boarden and that he unsuccessfully tried to extricate him. He did not believe White was injured seriously at the time, he said. Tisdale tried to get a negro at Boarden to help him free White, but was refused aid, he said. He made an unsuccessful effort to board the train as it was leaving Boarden, he said, and then telephoned to railroad officials here.

Railroad employees were forced to cut open the car with axes to free the boy's body. Railroad men said that a gondola loaded with pipes is a most dangerous place to ride on a freight train. The body was under several tons of iron pipes.

Had it not been for Tisdale's telephone message, the body might not have been found for several days, it was said. The train was a fast freight and was not scheduled to stop here long.

Coroner J. L. Galyon held an inquest after the body was recovered and expressed the belief that the boy was both suffocated and crushed to death.

Highway Employee Is Home After Accident

Frank Ramsey, aged 20, local employee of the State Highway Department, is at home here recovering from slight but painful injuries sustained in an automobile collision on No. 71 near Texarkana yesterday.

Ramsey and two other highway employees, L. O. Smith and O. K. Jobe, of Texarkana, were driving into Texarkana on No. 71 in a highway department truck Wednesday when a Miller county school bus, traveling east, struck them. The school bus remained upright but the highway truck capsized in a ditch. Ramsey and Jobe were only slightly injured, but Jobe was taken to a Texarkana hospital. He was reported discharged today.

Painful But Necessary

In one way the business depression that has been sitting on the nation's shoulders for the past few months will probably do us all a good deal of good—unpleasant as it may be just at present.

It has ended the old uncritical acceptance of good things that marked our attitude during the years of prosperity, and has set us to thinking and examining things. From being placid optimists assured of our destiny we have taken to studying to see what makes the wheels go 'round; and in the long run this ought to be very beneficial.

Prior to the October catastrophe of 1929, none of us bothered much about the whys and wherefores of things. The country was highly prosperous, and we took it for granted, as if fate had, by some benign decree, willed it that we of the United States were to be blessed beyond all other people simply because of our inherent goodness.

That frame of mind is comfortable but not healthy. It led to all kinds of weird talk and action. People who should have known better loudly proclaimed that we had entered "a new era," in which panic, business cycles and depressions would be no more. We had lifted ourselves by our bootstraps. Some virtue peculiar to the air we breathe had set us free from the old fears. Everlasting expansion was to be rule.

Well, we know better now; and, knowing better, we are in a more wholesome frame of mind. We can see defects in our economic structure that passed unnoticed before. We can see the flaws in some of our industrial and business practices in a way that we could not see them in the old days. Instead of taking things on faith, we are asking questions, looking into the future, trying to analyze things and striving to understand just what it may be that causes prosperity.

This, in the long run, is bound to be good for us. The ostrich, steadfastly hiding his head in the sands, never gets anything for his pains but a resolute kick in the posterior. If the current unpleasantness can cause a cessation in the out-pouring of bunk and nonsense that filled the air during brighter years, it will almost have justified itself.

The R-101 Catastrophe

THE catastrophe that overtook the British dirigible R-101 comes as an extremely unpleasant surprise to a world that had just about accepted the lighter-than-air ship as the ultimate in aeronautical safety.

Just what caused the disaster is not yet clear; however, it seems evident that a gigantic envelope filled with explosive, inflammable gas is far from being the safest companion for a trip through the skies. The margin of safety is not large. Perhaps, in the nature of things, it never can be.

Of course, experimentation in a new form of transportation is bound to be attended with many terrible accidents, and the tragedy of the R-101 may be just another hard-brought lesson about the perils of dirigible travel, like the accident to the Shenandoah; yet we had thought that those lessons had mostly been learned. These new aerial giants were supposed to be immune from such sudden catastrophes.

Whether or not this accident will set back the movement toward commercial transportation by dirigible is a question that only time can answer. Its effect on public sentiment is apt to be bad. Before this kind of transportation can establish itself it must convince people of its absolute safety, and much work now will have to be done all over again.

However, there are two things to be remembered in this connection. In the first place, the R-101 was severely criticized by competent aerial experts long before the disaster. Even before she took the air she was called obsolete. She was the largest airship afloat, but she was far from being recognized as the best.

In the second place, the R-101 used dangerous hydrogen gas; and the fire that destroyed her is simply one more proof that the non-explosive helium is the only gas for big dirigibles to use in safety. Explosion and fire are almost nonexistent perils in a helium-filled ship; and it is worth remembering that the American dirigibles use helium exclusively.

The tragedy of the R-101 was deplorable; but it need not be a fatal blow to dirigible development.

The Last Schooner Is Gone

THE last of the old fleet of windjammers has vanished from the Great Lakes in the sinking of the schooner Our Son; and those to whom the flavor of the old days is attractive will find a melancholy interest in the announcement.

The windjammers fared worse on the lakes than they did on the ocean. Coastwise schooners are still in service on saltwater, and some of them even clear for overseas ports; but the sailing vessel has been a rarity on the lakes for years. There are too many places like the Detroit and St. Clair rivers, where a schooner must be towed, to enable sail to compete with steam; and the steamboats on the lakes carry bulk freight so cheaply that the schooner's economic advantage is gone.

But the windjammers served the middle west very well in their day. They helped to build up the interior of the nation, and most of us will be sorry to learn that the last of them has gone.

Another 'Noble Experiment'—To Bolster Up a Weak Line

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON — Anyone who purports to collect and chronicle the more interesting news emanating from the national capital is forced to report that the recent fireworks set off by Secretary of Agriculture, Arthur M. Hyde have exploded in every direction with unexpected results.

Hyde, you will recall, is the boy who lit the fuses to the skyrockets in a series of statements undertaking to fasten blame for low wheat prices on a Russian concern which had sold a few million bushels short.

The grain trade, struck squarely in the seat of the pants when it wasn't looking, is much sorer at the administration than it was before, although it has agreed to endeavor to prevent foreign governments from selling short on the exchange. And the poor farmers, as invariably seems to be the case, are worse off than ever—wheat prices on the Chicago market dropping to the lowest level in 24 years.

Administration critics, joined by the Chicago grain men, profess to believe that the onslaught on the Soviet and its few million bushels of grain was a piece of political campaign strategy designed to line up the farmers with the administration in a whooped-up defense of the old homestead against the wicked Russians. That, however, presupposes an almost incredible naivete.

Democrats Tried It

As a matter of fact, it would be unfair to suggest that any special discredit ought to be attached to the Republicans for seeking to stir up animosity against Soviet Russia simply because nearly all Americans have little sympathy for the Communist theory.

The Democrats started that sort of thing when A. Mitchell Palmer was attorney general. There efforts to make political capital out of the wretched Communists failed, but it did just about suck the lemon dry.

Ever since the Communist movement in this country has gradually become weaker and more futile and it has been correspondingly more difficult for politicians to get the American people all not and bothered about it. Thus, even if it should be admitted that the administration has been trying to daunt the old Red herring before the farmers, it can be accused of nothing worse than political ineptitude.

The net effect of the present fiasco doubtless will be good. American politicians probably are being taught that the Red scare simply doesn't work any more as a remedy for all political ills.

Might Help G. O. P.

Lest it be thought that your correspondent enjoys chronicling all this, one hastens to point out that there are one or two ways by which the administration can strengthen itself with popular support as it makes hullabaloo about the Reds. It must be admitted that short sales of five or ten million bushels of wheat could hardly ruin the grain market and that the real reasons for wheat price depression are well known. But—

If it can be proved incontrovertibly that the Soviet Government has deliberately sought to depress American grain prices in order to stir up trouble among American farmers, this government will be able to spank the U. S. S. R., as hard as it knows how, amid the virtually unanimous cheering of all patriotic Americans. Hyde, Mr. McKelvie of the Farm Board and one or two others seem to think the U. S. S. R. had just that in mind and if they can prove it the country will be willing to believe almost anything of Stalin and his gang.

L. S. U. Senior In Libel Trial

His trial three postponed since his indictment last June for criminal libel, Kemble K. Kennedy, above, senior at Louisiana State University, is scheduled to go on trial this month in connection with the publication of an anonymous campus paper in which it is alleged he libeled the university's business manager. A resident of Farmerville, La., Kennedy served as president of the student bodies of both the university and the law school.

Mrs. Sid Henry Telephone 321

Don't you know it's autumn,
And the folks have put away
The flimsiness of summer
And the rhapsody of May—
Packing up the bubbles
And the blossoms, and the dew,
To keep them over winter till the
April buds come true,
Don't you know it's autumn
And the folks have been so smart
They've packed away a thousand
Dreams of summer in the heart—
Don't you know it's autumn,
And everywhere in town
They're wrappin' up the memories
That the summer showered down—
Nights of silver moonlight,
With a ripple on the stream,
And lovers in the lilacs,
And the old, old dream.—F. M.

RALLY DAY AT METHODIST CHURCH

Sunday will be observed by the Methodists of the city as church wide rally day. A special effort is being made to secure the largest possible attendance at all services of the day. The slogan is "All the church in Sunday school and all the Sunday school in church." A special rally has been undertaken by the Epworth Leaguers for their service at 8:45, and at 7:30 o'clock there will be a men's rally, sponsored by the Wesley Men's Bible class.

The center of the church will be reserved for men, and the Pastor's sermon theme will be "Wanted, a Man." A cordial invitation is extended to all men who are not in other services to be present. While the service is especially for men, everybody is invited. Special programs have been arranged for all services, and it is expected that large congregations will be present.

Beavers Work on Dam Heedless of Watches

CLARION, Pa., Oct. 10.—(UP)—Unmindful of spectators, one of the few remaining families of beavers in the state may be seen working daily on their dam and home on Deer Creek, near Shippensville.

The beavers at one time quite plentiful are now nearly extinct in Pennsylvania. The family near Shippensville migrated there about a year ago and was believed to have come from Big Sandy Creek, 15 miles away. The dam, built by the beavers, has backed up the water for about three miles. The creek is normally 20 feet wide at that point, but is now 50 feet wide at the dam. Fifty feet back of the dam the beavers' home, a log-cabin shaped structure, is located. It is half above and half below the water level.

The innovation, introduced in last week's special "bootleggers' court" sessions, is expected to enable federal authorities to keep constant check on the activities of dry law violators.

Under the new plan the usual sentences are imposed and in addition, defendants are given five-year sentences which are suspended on condition that the offenders report at regular intervals to federal probation officers.

Amphibious Plane Gear Manufactured in England

LONDON, Oct. 10.—(UP)—Amphibious gear suitable for light airplanes larger than 85 horsepower is now being manufactured in Great Britain. The machines are fitted with floats. Experiments have shown that the single central float and the land wheels do not appreciably reduce the performance. Planes equipped with the gear do not have to worry about aerodromes unless the weather is unusually rough. They can tie up to a mooring buoy. These planes may be used for scientific exploration and photographic work where close flying is necessary.

Russian Unemployment Reaches New Low Point

"Sylvia you are the queerest idiot-genius of this age. . . . The most ungovernable, self-intoxicated, blindly and deeply wilful little rapscallion-conductor that ever imposed itself on the infra-red end of the revolutionary spectrum as a leader."

Dynamiting Over Sheep Return Home

Road Construction Crews Frightened Animals From Pasture

GLACIER PARK, Mont. Oct. 10.—Rocky Mountain sheep have returned to their favorite haunt on the west slope of the Garden Wall of the Continental Divide, Superintendent J. R. Eakin, of Glacier National Park, reports.

Superintendent Eakin thinks they were temporarily frightened out of this region by the heavy section of the new Trans-Mountain highway, which was completed to the Continental Divide during the early summer. "These are the first sheep I have seen in this locality in several years," he said, "and the indications are that next summer's tourists will be afforded opportunity to see many of these animals in this section of the Rockies."

College Displays Lincoln Letter on Anniversary

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Oct. 10.—(UP)—"Very respectfully, A. Lincoln," was the way the President of the United States, who made the Pennsylvania State College and other land grant colleges possible, signed a letter accepting honorary membership in the college Washington Literary Society 70 years ago.

Attention was called to the old letter now displayed in the school library, as the college entered its 75th anniversary year.

Lincoln's letter reads, "Springfield, Ill., June 4, 1860. Chas. E. Troutman, Esq. Dear Sir—The Washington Agricultural Literary Society of the Farmers' High School of Pennsylvania will please accept my thanks for the honor done me in electing me an honorary member of the same. Very respectfully, A. Lincoln."

Ex-U. S. Senator Endorses Sargon

Sargon is rapidly becoming a household word throughout Canada and the United States. Thousands of grateful men and women from all walks of life have been lifted out of the throes of lost vitality, suffering, misery and ill health by its use.

In relating his experience with this famous medicine former United States Senator Thomas W. Hardwick, who served his state for six years in the Upper House of Congress, and who was later elected Governor of Georgia, said:

"I had lost most of my old-time energy and both mental and physical fatigue came more quickly than formerly. Constipation especially had troubled me for the past ten years and I had become accustomed to dosing myself with some physic or laxative every few days. My appetite was not keen and my meals did not seem to agree with me as they should. Sometimes I would feel positively wretched for days at a time. Sargon was highly recommended to me and I decided to try it.

"The medicine helped me from the very first. It gave me a splendid appetite. I don't know when I have enjoyed my meals more than I do now. I eat with more relish and experience no ill or uncomfortable after-effects whatever. Naturally my capacity for work has increased. I feel more efficient. I have more energy. In fact, I feel that I am in better health than I have been my pleasure to enjoy in many years, but most important of all, I do no longer find it necessary to continually take laxatives and cathartics.

"I also took Sargon Pills with fine results and consider them a valuable part of the treatment.

"I take pleasure in endorsing Sargon for the genuine improvement it has brought about in my physical condition."

BEHIN HOME TODAY

Adventure enters the life of CELIA MITCHELL, 17, when she learns the father she had supposed dead is alive and wealthy. She leaves her unpretentious home in Baltimore for a home in New York with her father, JOHN MITCHELL, and her aristocratic grandmother.

MARGARET ROGERS, her mother, divorced Mitchell and remarried and is now a widow. HARRY MITCHELL, young newspaper photographer, is in love with the girl and before leaving Baltimore Celia seemed to be loyal to his love. She is lonely in her new home.

Mitchell takes EVELYN PARSONS, beautiful widow, to introduce the girl to young people. Mrs. Parsons considers Celia a means to win Mitchell's affections and agrees. She invites the girl to her Long Island home for a week-end.

TOD JORDAN, fascinating but with a dubious reputation, is tentative to Celia and Mrs. Parsons encourages the match. When the other guests leave Celia continues her visit.

LISI DUNCAN, socially prominent, invites her to attend a swimming party. Celia narrowly escapes drowning and is rescued by Jordan. Her father hears of the affair and insists the girl must return home. The same evening Jordan calls and in a romantically scene tells Celia he loves her. She returns to New York next day and receives a telephone call.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXV

"WHO is it?" Celia demanded eagerly. She held the French telephone close to her ear. The "gentleman" at the other end of the line was a butler explaining that Miss Lisi Duncan wished to speak to Miss Mitchell. A moment later Celia heard Lisi's gay voice.

"That you, Celia?" she asked. "Evelyn told me you'd gone home. I telephoned her a few minutes ago. Listen, how're you feeling today?"

"Oh, I'm all right!" Surely, Celia thought to herself, she must have said that a thousand times in the last 24 hours.

"Fine! Honey, I want you to have lunch with me tomorrow. I'm going to drive in and I'll pick you up about 1:30. That O. K.?"

Celia thought it would be. It cheered her immensely to think Lisi wanted to be friendly. She promised to be ready.

"That's settled then. By-by, honey!"

After Celia put down the telephone she wondered if her grandmother could object. It would be horrible to have to call off the engagement. She decided to wait until her father arrived home before mentioning the luncheon party.

He came shortly after four, asking immediately for his daughter. The girl was reading.

"Home again!" Mitchell called as he entered the library. "Well, Celia, let's hear all about this casually of yours."

"Oh, father, I can't understand how it happened. One minute I was swimming along and the next the wave came over me and I thought I was sinking—"

Mitchell sat down beside her, asked questions. He wanted to know the name of the young man who had saved her. Celia, with trembling eagerness, told him. She explained she had met Jordan at Evelyn Parsons'.

"Oh, yes? Well, I wouldn't stand on a little point of etiquette if I were drowning!" he said dryly.

Celia laughed. She explained she wasn't referring to social proprieties, but thought Mitchell might remember saving Jordan. Her father shook his head.

"Can't say I do," he said. Then he wrote down the name. "Well—I'll look after this young man—"

"But I'm sure he wouldn't—I mean I don't think he'd accept money or anything like that!" she protested.

Mitchell put the memorandum book back into his pocket.

"Never mind about that," he said. "Celia, I had a pretty uncomfortable half hour last night before I knew you were safe. There was emotion in his voice that surprised the girl. Mitchell put out a hand and took Celia's, and for a moment there was understanding silence between them.

"I MUST run upstairs and dress," the girl said, rising. She was afraid to show how deeply she had been touched. Before she reached the door Celia remembered Lisi and the luncheon engagement. She told her father about it.

"That's all right," he said. "I want you to have plenty of young friends. I'll speak to your grandmother."

She thanked him and went on out of the room.

There was a letter from Celia's mother next morning. It was not the first the girl had received from Mrs. Rogers since arriving in New York, but coming at this particular time, its effect was profound. Celia was at her dressing table lazily polishing her nails when Martha knocked on the door and gave her the letter.

The girl greeted the familiar handwriting with delight. Then she ran to the chaise longue, sank down and tore open the envelope.

"My darling child," was the salutation. Celia read on quickly. There was little news. Mrs. Rogers wrote that she was feeling well and very busy. It was the vacation season and two of the sisters at Margot's were away.

Margaret Rogers said that Barney had come to see her. He was working hard.

"I hope you are very happy with your new friends," the last paragraph read, "but remember, above all else, to take care of yourself. Write soon. Oh, my darling, how I love you. Your Mother."

After the girl had finished reading it she sat for a long time looking down at the letter. It brought back sharply everything in the life she had left. Mother, Barney—she saw them through different eyes. She was glad she had written both of them Monday. She should have done so earlier. Somehow, there seemed little time to write. There was so much else to do. Her precious mother! Celia thought of her mother going to work, bending over her sewing through hot days. Was she really well? A wave of revulsion swept over the girl as she thought of Margaret Rogers' long hair and privations and the luxury with which she herself was surrounded.

Finally she folded the letter and put it under a pile of lingerie in a drawer of the dressing table.

Lisi was late. It was nearly two o'clock when she drove up to the Mitchell home and sounded the French horn of her coupe. Celia hurried out of the house to stop the uproar before it reached her grandmother's ears.

"Hello!" Lisi greeted her brightly. "Am I late? It's the precious traffic. Red lights all the way! I swear, crossing the bridge—"

She bubbled on as Celia stepped into the car. Then they circled the square and headed up-town.

Lisi was looking particularly well in a green and white printed frock and small green hat that seemed to minimize her freckles.

"How's my hat?" she demanded. "It's Kate's, and she'd have 47 cat fits if she knew I had it. Have I got it on right?"

Celia said the hat looked very well.

"We're going to ——" the other girl said, naming a small, fashionable restaurant. "Dick's to meet us there. It's all right. He knows I'm always late."

"Who's Dick?" Celia asked.

LISI grinned. "The plot thickens," she said. "Haven't had time to explain why I really called you yesterday. Dick's my Big Thrill. He's an actor—oh, a good one, too! Going to open in a wonderful show next month. But you see I can't have him out at the house or meet him at the club because of Kate. Every time a man I like sees Kate they forget me like that!"

Lisi's fingers snapped. "She goes after them on purpose. Kate's mean as the dickens that way. Ask her little sister if you want to learn all. I fished up this excuse of lunching with you so I could get into town without a row. Anyhow, I didn't think you'd mind."

It was impossible to hold resentment against Lisi.

The man who rose when they entered the foyer of the restaurant was not, to Celia's way of thinking, "a love." He was too blond, too conscious of his regular features, and too eager to talk about himself.

A waiter led them to a corner table which had been reserved. Lisi fell into eager conversation about how rehearsals were going, and whether Dickey had succeeded in getting his part enlarged.

He had not but he was going to talk to the director that afternoon. Celia sat back and listened. She thought the attraction between Lisi and this fair-haired Dicky curious. A vision of Tod Jordan's dark good looks rose in her memory.

"But Celia!" Lisi turned laughing. "I forgot to tell you Dicky's name! Isn't that a scream? Listen, he's Richard Brandon Caruthers on the theater programs. Remember that! Last spring Dicky was playing in 'Flinders Keepers' when I met him."

"It was a good part," Caruthers put in. He explained to Celia that he played juvenile roles and preferred drama though he had appeared in musical comedies.

The luncheon was appetizing. Celia devoted herself to the creamed sweetbread and salad and let the others talk. It was interesting to hear this familiar gossip of the stage. Somehow she had expected an actor to be a more glamorous person than Richard Brandon Caruthers.

At 3:30 they left the restaurant. Dicky was to report at the theater at four. They all climbed into the coupe and Lisi drove toward Broadway. Celia dared not admit it was her first view of that famous thoroughfare.

IN the afternoon sun she thought the great electric signs looked hideous and the street had a cheap, dismal air. It was very hot. Curious looking men and women passed. Caruthers left them in front of a theater which to Celia was one of the ugliest.

All the way to Grammercy Park Lisi chattered of the young man's attractions.

"You know," she said impulsively. "I like you, Celia. I knew I could depend on you. You're on the level!"

Celia replied that she liked Lisi too. It was agreed they should meet again soon.

The next day was dreary but on Saturday Mrs. Mitchell and Celia drove to Westchester to attend a society fair for the benefit of charity.

Celia was not interested until she visited the fortune teller's tent. Her grandmother, with an odd quirk of character, had the greatest faith in seers.

"Ask her to read your future!" Mrs. Mitchell urged and the girl went into the brightly festooned booth.

She offered her palm to the aged gypsy.

"Can you see anything there?" Celia asked as she sat down.

The old woman studied the hand several moments.

"Sweethearts," she muttered. "Two of them. One handsome! I see—"

The gypsy's sharp eyes darted upward and her voice rose "I see—Danger!"

Ford's Offer to Buy Blast Furnace Refused

BLAIRSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 10.—(UP)—Indiana county residents have been assured that the historic Buena Vista blast furnace, one of the oldest in the country, will not be removed to the Henry Ford museum at Dearborn, Michigan.

When it was reported Ford was seeking to obtain the furnace a movement was started to keep it here.

The Vinton Colliery Company, owner of the furnace, after a conference with Indiana county representatives, refused to sell and gave the furnace with the adjoining land to the county for a park.

The furnace stands on the banks of Blacklick Creek, near Armagh. The Daughters of the American Revolution have indicated they will take care of the site.

The new Boulder dam will be 45 feet thick at the top and 450 feet at the bottom with a length of 1,054 feet.

BLACK-DRAUGHT
LONG IN USE

Georgia Lady Tells of Buying Her First Package of This Medicine in 1876.

Gainesville, Ga.—Theford's Black-Draught has been in use for the relief of constipation, indigestion and biliousness, for nearly one hundred years, and many people tell of having taken it, when needed, all their lives.

Mrs. M. C. Barron, of 64 West Myrtle Street, this city, recalls her first use of Black-Draught, fifty-three years ago.

"When I lived in Forsythe, Ga., in 1876," says Mrs. Barron, "I bought my first Black-Draught at Mr. Jim Jay's store. He was selling it, and some one in the store recommended it to me for biliousness, and as I was having trouble and needed a purgative, I bought it."

"If I get constipated, I have headaches and feel so tired and sluggish, and such a bad taste in my mouth. But after I take a few doses of Black-Draught I get all right."

"In all these years, I have never found a better medicine of the kind. I am satisfied, so why change? I recommend it to old and young."

Sold in 25¢ packages.

of the crust is SHORTENING

HAVE you ever stopped to think that almost one-third of the pie crust is the shortening you use? Doesn't it seem important, then, that the shortening should be pure, fresh and sweet . . . good to eat?

And when you serve the pie at your table you actually eat this shortening. Certainly it should be as fresh and good as the finest eggs, and as sweet and pure as the best milk.

The Wesson Oil people make Snowdrift for folks who feel that nothing can be too good to eat. The extra quality, extra care they put into every pound costs you ever so little more. And Snowdrift is pure—made from a selected oil as fine as a choice salad oil, free from animal fat. It is creamed while fresh and hurried into an air-tight, sealed can so that all its goodness is brought to you. Nothing, not even air, can touch it until you break that seal.

Snowdrift is Down in Price

Snowdrift is now down in price . . . at its lowest price in years. There's added goodness for every bit of cookie or hot-bread. There's an added sureness in baking. And the satisfaction of knowing that Snowdrift is as good and wholesome as any food you serve the family. Price Snowdrift and see how little it costs to have all the helpful "extras" for every day cooking.

Maurice Poirier, left, an inventor of Burbank, Calif., is shown here with the model of a rocket plane which he hopes will attain a speed of 600 miles an hour. Both the model and the full-sized ship, which Poirier plans to build soon, will be powered by the fireworks spouting from the tubes in the tail, but the big plane will have a small gasoline motor for taking off and landing. The inventor and his assistant, Franklin Wallace, are shown here charging the model for an experimental flight.

"Hoosier Ponzi" Faces Three Jail Sentences

MUNICH, Ind., Oct. 10.—(UP)—Three sentences to be served concurrently—one for one to three years and two for one to five years—were given Alpha Holaday, the "Hoosier Ponzi" after he was alleged to have swindled victims out of $300,000.

Only $15,000 was recovered from his activities which were in the nature of swindling one person to pay another who in turn was to be swindled.

Holaday gave himself up after officers searched for two years, under the mistaken idea that he was wanted only a charge of wife desertion.

Wisconsin Watching 2 New Animal Diseases

MADISON, WIS., Oct. 10.—(UP)—Two diseases traceable to animals, tularemia and undulant fever, have been placed on the list of reportable diseases to ascertain their extent in the state, the State Board of Health has announced.

Only five cases of tularemia contracted from handling rabbits, have been reported, but the approach of the rabbit hunting season is expected to increase conditions for transmission of the disease. Those preparing wild rabbits for cooking were advised to use rubber gloves. More than 50 cases of undulant fever, having its source in hogs and cows, have been reported this year, while 42 cases were listed by the state laboratory of hygiene in test work in 1929.
